When the Words makes up the World

"My words are my deeds. I am, what I speak"

The words of Martin Luther King once reverberated the whole air. words are an integral part which determines, how successful a person is.

The greatest changes the world has ever seen, was brought about by several great personalities. And what made them achieve this was their words and deeds. From the primitive age of evolution to the present age of visual magics, ^{man} human witnessed a variety of changes.

Man is considered to be a social animal as he can think and express his ideas. words are the most powerful medium ever found to express one's own ideas.

The pages of history reveals, instance in which, a single comment has turned over a great war.

"All that this war shall bring us is sweat, tear and blood".

This single statement made by the former Prime Minister of the United Kingdom, Winston Churchill, took out the horrible patches that the World War II could have marked on the country. A chain of words was able to change the social scenario of a country and he turned out to be the most powerful leader the world has ever seen.

words, as a medium is used to express in many ways. It can be used to speak out as a speech, as in case of many of the famous orators and can be used in the writings. It is said that a pen is mightier than a sword.

But what gives power to these weapons are words. Over thousands of languages across the globe, the magic of ~~power~~ words have created the stories of success.

words transforms into thoughts and thoughts result in action. This is the basic strategy accepted by world famous psychiatrist and thinker Zigmund Freud. Every action begins from words.

Dr. A.P.J. Abdul Kalam, the missile man of India influenced millions of youngsters through his word. The words of Abraham Lincoln gave way to the banning of slavery around the country. The speeches made by Martin Luther King and Swami Vivekananda still echoes all around. The power of words still holds fort.

Even our epics, the Ramayana and Mahabharatha teach us the stories of mythical heroes who used words as their weapons. Goddess Sunmitra, mother of Lakshmana, became^{was} the one to say the most important lines in the history of epics. And that turned her into the ideal concept of what how a mother should be.

Even the independence struggle has shown us this. The success of Mahatma Gandhi begins from the comment 'Do or Die' that he made at the time of Quit India movement.

Adolf Hitler was the one who reminds us about the dark age of Barbarism. But in the mindsets of millions, the words he used in his autobiography, 'The Main Camp' still brings out tears.

A seventeen year old girl from Pakistan turned out to be world's youngest Nobel laureate with the power of her words. The courage to speak out^{and to} write a blog & with the fake name 'Gul Makai', made her the spirit that flows through the blood of millions of Girls. Malala Yousufzai - the queen of words.

Books have turned out the culture of a society. Writers like Shir Khera, Robert Frost, Amish Tripathi, J.K Rowling, Tagore brought about changes in our society with their words. Even the latest book written by Sri. Santhosh Achikkanam, named "Biriyani", made a sudden quake all over Kerala.

S.T. Coleridge, William Shakespeare, Wordsworth, Milton, Keats are all those one who had the glittering essence of rainbow in them. People like Wangari Mathaai used her words to spread her ideas and gather people to protect the environment. She found success in it.

January 17, 2016 was marked in red letters in the educational history of India. The Suicide of Rohith Vemula, brought out tears. Though he is physically no more in this world, his ~~world~~ words still lives, in the heart of the people.

Kanayyakumari, the new representative of Indian Youth, with his sparkling speeches set out a revolution. Deepa Nishanth, a common college lecturer from Kerala, set out a fire through her ~~f~~ social media posts and writings.

last one was the year in which three reformers of a dark-hidden society was cruelly assassinated. Kalburgi, Narendra Dabolkar, and Gouinda Pansare, who spoke out their views is no more. The vicious criminals was able do kill them, but not their words and ideas.

The recent issues of Demonitisation, Terrorism, uniform civil code etc was the results of words and deeds of certain people. Demonitisation ~~events~~ revealed us that, words can go useless if it is not properly expressed.

In the issues of Media Freedom of media, the comments made by Dr. Sebastian Paul and Justice Ramanachandran Nair was appreciable. Their words took them to the heights of glory.

In a country like India, where unity in diversity holds fast, it's the words of our social reformers that gives us hope and strength to stay united. words are the roads that take one to the mountains of success. But words alone are not the ones, ~~some~~ but it is the main one.

Though it is said that words are powerful, it is pathetic that our freedom of speech and expression is seriously questioned. Even our constitution guarantees it. But we ourselves don't. ~~The w~~ Zaira Wasim, a sixteen year old girl received threatening from many many people as she spoke out what she thought. Even the future of our country, the youth are afraid to speak out.

The words of Lord Krishna to Arjuna in Mahabharatha is often remembered. words result in action. And our actions makes people great. Good words and good deeds hopefully opens the door of success. Indeed, words makes a successful man.

"words are like finger prints. Nobody's are the same. But you're it over everything, whatever you do".

- M.K. Gandhi.
