English essay: Words make a successful man.

Success! This is a word that we frequently hear in this world of competition. So, what is success? Is it merely making a handful of money? There was time when money was the parameter that decide the success of man. But the world has now changed. Success has been extended from the old and obsoleted borders. It is now a much goal oriented process. It is a world where your goals and your behavior makes you a successful person.

Now, the time has arrived to analyze about the factors that moulds a successful man. We may have known about the interviews that NCC's now conduct.

The NCES now want persons with much enlightened character. Not the machines that simply says what they have referred. They check whether the candidate has ability to cope up with the changing environment. Does he has the ability to successfully mingle with society and co-workers. Is he cultured? The solution to all these questions lie with the simple fact: Does he love words?

How do words help to mould successful persons. "A pen is mightier than a sword" it is a commonly used proverb. The power of this simple 'word' lies within this proverb. The powerful words of an enlightened mind can instill the ~~minds~~ of many. That is why the world has still remembers and cherish the world classics. The world classics are the big canvans that redraus the history of mankind. We studies the past and then prepare for future. Don't we? So its simply mean that the one who analyses the history of mankind through the words of writers will be successful in drawing their future.

We've heard about the Pakistani girl Malala Yousafzai. She had once said in U.S assembly 'A pen, A student, A teacher can change the world'. These words are appropriate to know the power of words. We can take the case of Malala, the world will agree that she is one of the successful persons in the world. She is just a teenager. Then how come she became successful girl in the world? One answer 'words'.

Through her words she said about the cruelty of Taliban terrorists to the whole world. She wrote about the suppressions of that girls like her face in smooth valley through blog in the name 'Gulmakkai'. Malala's words really shocked the world and the world became much aware about the terror of terrorists.

It is said that new-gen students are addicted to the social medias and they have forgotten the importance of words. But what Malala did? She took the right path that social media opened. It was through this way that she achieved greatness.

The noble men world ever seen always praised the importance of words. Socrates once said that I only need three things in my life that is books, books and books.

The malayalam poet Kunjanni Mashu had also said about the importance of reading. He said that "you will grow whether you read or not read. But if you read you will be flourished, if you don't read you will be withered". It is a poem that has its importance to in the present world itself.

Through books we are getting familiarised with many lives, experiences. They all are different. But they will be ^{an} asset in our future journey. How? The experiences that we do see through sometimes may happen in our life too. The experiences that we get through reading will help to cope up with the diverse life situations that we pass through.

Now, let us step into another dimension of words. It is through the words, that is reading that our culture develops. When we familiarize with the enlightened ideas of writer we too get an enlightenment. It will help us to think, react about the changes that take place in our society.

We may have studied everything in your curriculum, but if we don't know the changes that happen in our society, how we will be successful. A successful man is one who interact efficiently with society. To efficiently interact with the society we need to know about society. For that we must read newspapers, journals book a lot. Then we will be able to say an opinion that have validity in society.

Indian Civil Service examination is the biggest examination conducted by UPSC. The greatest barrier to this exam and to be a civil servant is an interview with the eminent scholars of various fields. They are interviewing the candidate to know how deep they knew about their society. If one has to be successful here he or she must know about the rapidly changing world. The words help them to achieve this.

They are the hope of nation and they are the building block of a nation if a nation has to be successful the citizens of tomorrow must be successful. The bridge that lie between youngsters and success can only be passed with the words that act as balance.

In the case of civil servant they are the one who leads the nation's administration. If their aim is social welfare they must know about society through their own experiences and that of those who gone before them -

The state library Council of Kerala has conducted a state youth festival for students of all Kerala. There was a competition to make characters sketch of the famous characters made by prominent malayalam writers. To the students of fourteen districts was given the character of 'Appuni' of 'Nalukkettu'. But unfortunately none of them had heard about Appuni nor the Alla piccha mollakka of legend of Khashak Aikharakkinte Itihasangal).

If the students will continue to follow this path. How can they be successful? If one has to be successful he must know his roots instead of investigating about the other planets or countries. But unfortunately they doesn't bother about it, not students not parents. All of them just pursue marks and status. But remember the one who take their roots and culture into their heart will succeed.

I think the reason for the ever increasing violence is the decreasing habit of reading. People are more attracted to the negatives of technology. They visit ^{get} some sites, addicted to drugs via internet friends and in its influence they forget about their behaviours and the co-living beings.

Our excise commission Rishiraj Singh says that "I think a wide and deep reading culture" can curb the ever increasing violence against women".

So why are we hesitating? Why can't we change this world? Christine Lagard first lady finance minister of G-8 Economy suggest education as a way to tackle the curse of gender inequality.

Yes, education is the foundation upon which any change is build. But this education must not be merely a technology to make machines that spit what they have studied in text book. Education must be empowered with wide variety of books that and plans that instill students to pursue the path of words and be successful.

So dream about a world which is filled with successful person who think about social welfare.

Hail the world, Hail the world.
