

Does diversity unite or divide?

The word 'diversity' in the literal sense means heterogeneous series of any kind that is present. Mostly organisms are meant to have classified into different diversities. These diversities varies according to the difference in them. The world we see is kind of like a whole universe having diversities in almost all aspects. Usually, diversity is likely a boon somewhat in the field of knowledge because it helps us to classify the needed topic into its variety of inheritance. But, a very important rising question in today's world is that 'does diversity unite or divide?'

Diversity is not always about classification or differentiation based on the varieties, sometimes it applies to our society as well. Around the world, societies and their beliefs, customs and ways are entirely different and thus we can-say that there is diverse societies here in the world. Having different cultures and traditions are good though they insist to have some impacts towards the world. Some people tend to believe that its their culture and society which is the best and may have thoughts and views as that other societies, or other's customs, beliefs etc are inferior to them. This eventually leads to have discrimination. Even though this diversity on the basis of culture and society is beneficial, it can also make a sense of pride and discrimination in some people's mind.

In the field of Science and Research Studies, diversity is truly needed and is considered as an inevitable part. Diverse organisms are founded and studies or researches based on the information gathered helped the mankind to link him with nature. Even by learning about the different kinds of microorganisms like bacteria and virus, various medicines, vaccines and treatment of method have been evolved. Thus we are able to cure most of the ailments occurring to us.

The earth, which is the only living planet is contended with all the diversities. Humans are still contributing to learn and find more about the diversities present on the earth. The findings of diverse minerals present on the lithosphere helped the progress of development. But at the same time, that raised a division of rich and poor among us. Taking gold as a simple example, today the value of gold is priceless as it is considered as one of the minerals which is hard to find. People started to have a mindset that the person with whom these kind of valuable sources are available is the richest. The wealthiest person is do considered to have a greater status in the society as compared to others. The feeling of poor being less considered and the rich getting more opportunity is profoundly influencing the people even the young ones.

The diversity in flora and fauna helped us to have different kingdoms to be named and classified and to identify the family of similar kinds. Even so, we got to know that a tiger is more powerful than a leopard though they belonged to the same family and even in places where holding wild animals is legal, people started to have tigers with them. White elephants were in more demand while they were on the verge of extinction and were given high prices on them. Whereas the regular grey elephants were free to travel through the jungle and live freely in their environment. The diversity which made an impact to see them differently influenced their life very much.

Usually, the young generation are advised to choose a career field better of all in their interest or passion. The diversities in the case of educational streams and career is very beneficial as it help one's to choose their career path and work with their aimed passion. Sometimes, some tend to think that the field of medicine and engineering is the best out of all and maybe they even see other fields less likely important and efficient. But the real fact is that every career has its own purpose and each of them is important in a society. Even so, people still have a tendency to divide the best out of all the possible career paths on the basis of the diverse fields of jobs. When most of the times diversity do positively impact the world there are still a negative side of it. Mostly it is caused by the views and points of humans who are less likely to understand it.

For example, the different religions in the world we see today made several impacts. The Jews tend to demolish the muslim mosque in Palestine while in some other part of the world in India, a man was rejected from a job interview because of his caste and religion. But there are still some, who considers all religions equally and tries to maintain a featerinity among each and every of it. If we consider the majority of the causes due to different religions, it mostly created alot of inequality sense among many people. Thus we can say that due to the different religions people are more likely to be less united on that basis.

Mainly there are two gender diversity in organisms and human beings. We are to be either male or female in accordance to our biological aspects. But in this case also gender inequality tend to involve. Most of the time, men were considered as inferior to women and thus lead to many issues, protests, non-agreements, etc between men and women. Women were to fight for their rights and ownership in the society just because people made a different point of view among the both genders. Even the case of transgenders can be considered. This real diversity among genders influenced these transgenders the most. They were not even considered as a part of the society and were taken as the unworthy citizens. They too had to fight for their rights.

Diverse culture do help to link with different ways of customs and traditions which makes the world unique. There were many occasions and programmes conducted around the world for others to know about various other traditions unknown to them and to fruitfully unite them. This also helped in a way to make people realise that even some customs and traditions are linked with each other and on a lowkey have similarities.

As humans, we all have diverse thoughts and emotions completely different from others. Even though our characters can be controlled by genes, our views, emotions and all are completely different. But this is helpful in a very good manner. Because people having various and varieties of creations, innovations and projects can help the world to develop. Different individuals with different ideas can join together to create great innovations of all the time.

Diversity does help to unite and divide but it is based on the aspects. The way we approach the diverse of everything is what's more important. It is based on our reactions and approach we can decide whether the diversity of anything unites in a good way or divides it in a rough manner. The fact that as everything has its own good and bad, diversity also matters in the same way.
