"War happens when language fails"

War often is regarded as a physical dispute between two masses who possess contradictory beliefs. It often hinders the peace and stability of a community and deteriorates a nation's person's overall development in all spheres of life. From Vladimir Putin's inhumane morale to China's extreme tyranny, wars have often been sought to destroy a nation and its principles. The concept of war is solely based on the principles of ulterior motives and agendas.

Even though it undermines the general wealth and peace of a stable community, it is often an underlying principle that depicts the authority and strength. War is a result of Miscommunication. It happens when people fail to render thoughts which are mutual. As in the case of the ongoing rivalry between Palestine and Israel, this further contributes to the idea that war happens when people fail to share a common idea due to arrogance which might seem to be justice. Contradictory ideas and opposing views leads to miscommunication. These views are a result of a person's background and upbringing.

The theme of language causing war often encapsulates and is similar to the idea depicted in the renowned movie "The Dark Knight rises" - One of Sir Christopher Nolan's masterpiece cinematography. The film contributes a most powerful thought "A person should rather die as a hero than live long enough to see himself become the villain". One resorts to war because one believes believes that is the most just and profounding method to ~~rest~~ restore balance. Indulging in proper communication reduces instances of War. This recurrent idea dwells upon the fact that most of the our daily disputes can be truly reduced if we take a time ~~enough~~ enough time to truly understand and accept opposing views.

War is often portrayed as a physical dispute but philosophy often portrays wars as an internal conflict rather than a physical one. Language aids and builds a safe barrier between people. From the early stone age, to the exist exists present modern era, it has concealed peace and bear integrity.

It has nationalised our ideologies. When language renders failure, War commences. The irony is astounding, how a <sup>single</sup> person's unjust idea brings death upon numerous people. Language penetrates a person's inner conscience, it enlightens a person with limitless knowledge and ideas. Literature and Language are solely the exi foundation of a ~~p~~ truly successful person/nation. Language binds us together, it moulds us with a perfect ideologies.

From Shakespearean classics to Dostoevsky's profounding ideas, Never has something truly affected our interests and modes of action. Each word utters a symphony, it is a symphony that can either be interesting, or offensive. Historical evidences do heed to the factor that words and deeds are so-dependant of each other: Biblical stories of Egypt and Israel, the extravagant Greek Mythology, the tyrannical rule of Hitler's Dictatorship and are arguable sufficient examples that supports the above statement: The Failure of language penetrates a question → How does it fail?

This is surely a question that makes the linguists ponder; It is often due to a gap / barrier that occurs due to miscommunication, or failure of conventional methods. A recent study of 2017 reports that the increase in conflicts have been relatively due to the fact that people are unable to tolerate each other. It is often due to the idea that another person's views could possibly overthrow one's own ideas. Thus a failure of language dwells upon selfishness.

and disagreements and stubbornness. Agreements of Peace eradicates chances of War, UNESCO is a sufficient example that supports this idea. The Great Nations of South and North Korea are truly substantiates the concept and importance of Peace Treaty. Those who have built their trust upon the symphony of language prevails despite all obstacles and those which lack the capacity to reciprocate this idea indulges in inhumane and unsatisfactory policies.

Building a person's character can ~~or~~ definitely defy the chances of war, as character development results in further effective language communication. Character can truly impact a person and their thoughts. When effective communication and a good morale combines, it can bring eye-opening great results. As a result, one must practise the art of language, one must let themselves be free off the pride and prejudices, one must seek true wisdom and if one ~~or~~ succeeds in achieving all of this one can bring an end to War.

The effects of War can have <sup>be</sup> lifelong effects. "The little boy" which was dropped off at Hiroshima and Nagasaki was in fact not so little at all. Up to this day, people of Hiroshima are efficient testimonies to the casualty that war presents us. War can neither bring power nor authority, it is merely a concept that is rooted in ~~immense~~ pride, it is only an evidence of the darkness that consumes a person. It is only a ~~more~~ manipulative gas method which could end up in physical and emotional trauma. This conflict of ideas can even affect a person physically, mentally and psychologically. War victims often suffer from PTSD (Post traumatic stress disorder) and many other neurological diseases. War creates a rift between the homo sapiens, it distances them from their species, <sup>even</sup> it creates numerous psychological damage, uncurable even by the world of Medicine.

Wars can neither fulfill our desires, it can only distort us, our morals and our practises. The Modern era with its rising conflicts <sup>brings</sup> poses up this ever - ending need for reformation and change. Reforming our thoughts and rationalising our beliefs, and can truly humanize the inhumane parts of ourselves that craves strength, and dominance. Mobilising these ideas among people can even end war.

War can truly be troublesome and barbarous, thus one must always pledge to ~~us~~ always be a true achiever of peace rather than resorting to war. Humanity must be liberated from the shackles that bind them toward conflicts. Humanity must then seek true wisdom, be a craftsman of peaceful ideas and be a must convey them in a proper manner. Those who never seek to an end to love, can never hate, they can never resort to war. The triumph of our future ~~self~~ is based on ~~to~~ our ability to understand our fellow

Language, being a synonym of individual characters can sustain the peace and stability that one wishes to see and be renewable. War is a silence between words and deeds, its an true eradicator of the numerous principles that maintains balance between people. A war of language / miscommunicated ideas / opposing views can lead to a physical turmoil. Talking ourselves with not elegant language good morals can bring out peace. Thus, War happens when language fails to be of its true purpose - a method of peace.
