

A Slice of life.

~~27~~

2024

A time without sorrow.
Each day looking for tomorrow.
All day long is meant to play
And all day long my mom would lay.
A sweet kiss upon my forehead.
Never a little tear did I shed
My mother was there always for me.
and she'd spread joy everywhere.
That's a slice of life when I remained as a baby.

Another slice of life bloomed soon
And my mind danced with its tune.
New friends
and new friends
Each day was meant to study
For each day I was taken to school by Daddy.
Sometimes a little out burst of sadness
Sometimes a little out burst of happiness.
Sometimes I was grounded
But most of the time I sounded rather filled with joy.
I remember being carefree once
And now my life is full of duties.
That's another slice of life.
When I was just a kid.

Now I'm fully grown up
They say that my family looks upto me.

I've got other peoples life to handle
I've got my very own life to handle.

Full of anguish, stress and fear and most of all the need for love.

Trapped in world's unfair rules
And now's these set me free.

And no one's there to set me free.

I longed alot for my mother's love and hugs and ~~of~~ my father's soothing looks.

That's a small slice of life
When I found Adulthood unbearable.

Then came a time
when everything ~~is~~ needed help.

I was very weak by flesh
and so was my mind.

Helplessness had to put its lock upon my heart
And kept the key, so far for my old eyes to spot.

Solitude had shattered my ~~best~~ soul which indeed was foul.

To get up, ~~to~~ sit, to eat, to walk
To sit, to hold, ~~to~~ ~~talk~~ and even to talk
I had to call a million names.

Eventhough no one answered this lame
fr. old fellow. I did wish to hear a 'yes'

Ruined like an old hat.

I had to cut
I thought to cut my life short.

But that was something so hard to do

For it would make my meaningless base life more meaning less.

And so I remained
all alone, left to rot
under the sun who's hot.

Now that's a slice of life too.

So many life lives left in front
as a warning

And so many times did I wanted to live right.

But the devil had caught me
and put his spell's up on me which had ruined me to the outmost.

wish I found a peek of light which would be from my mom.

wish I could walk back to her.

And hold her tight never to let go.

Mom, I really wish I had found your love.

These slices of life

I set before you.

So that you can walk through the light and see. win in a land that never dies -

that tomorrow.

27
2021