

THE FUTURE OF DEMOCRACY

In the modern world, we have everything, from food to education, all our basic needs are readily satisfied, most importantly, freedom. Individual freedom can be considered as the valuation key of an exemplary nation in this era, and with the advent of social media and internet, it is a global responsibility to ensure equality, justice, and freedom in every corner of the world. Democracy is the system of government that ensures this in a nation-basis. At present, almost every country is under democratic governance, and it can be considered as a pivotal factor in the development of the human race. Democracy has proven to be one of the most successful mode of governance and it is our duty as a growing citizen to ensure the continuity of this system in its whole effect for the betterment of our future and that of the generations to come.

The impact of democracy is huge, because it was the demand of a whole, exploited nation and was achieved by the most biggest of human uprisings, the French Revolution. France, a nation which was broken from the foundation by the despotic regime of kingship and landlordism, was brought back by the mass protest of the common man, the farmers, workers, and lower class. It was the education of this class that led to an organised, structured protest against the unfair taxation and treatment of priests, kings, and landlords. It was the French philosophers and thinkers like Voltaire, Montesquieu etc. that laid the foundation of modern democracy. They, after analysing and viewing the problems of the public from an unbiased, educated perspective, educated the public for the need of a fairer and transparent government, and made the backbone of the mother of all the revolutions throughout history. It was the revolution of a people ablazed with the sense of justice, freedom and equality that gave the modern world its core idea of a transparent, powerful method of governance. It was then, that we got the idea of a rule by the people, for the people and of the people. Without it, the world would've been a very different, and possibly darker place for us.

Injustice has proven to reap the best of ideals, and power, with the lack of such a system, has proven to be chaos. The World Wars I and II, which was the conflict between the topmost powerful nations over the globe, is a terrible reminder of power, kingship, dictatorship and the need of peace and global co-operation. Both the sides, made affluent by imperialism and colonialism, has shown us the most shameful, cruel face of mankind and continues to haunt us and the affected communities. Powered by nothing but greed, racism, misunderstanding and arrogance, this is the most haunting incident of the lack of proper governance and uncontrolled wealth combined, and reminds us that another of such foolish and uncivilized act can lead to global destruction.

but if it happens, World War IV would be fought with twigs and stones'

- Albert Einstein

Humans now stand in the top podium of the world, maybe the whole universe, because of his powerful mind and intellect. He now holds power because his mind is infinitely powered, and hunts for new things every second. Millions and billions of such minds have made up the present world, disorganised, destroying itself from the core, organised, expanding like the universe itself.
Democracy is the need of a thriving and successful nation. For the upliftment of the nation, every individual, irrespective of every category apart from age, should participate and facilitate the governance of the country. It must not be another reason for us to pick sides and fight with each other, but to form strong sides to lead ourselves to a better future. The three systems of a democracy, Legislative, Executive and Judiciary, are the soul of a guided, perfected and moulded society. It is the duty of every citizen to ensure the democracy of his/her nation, and making it the most effective, rather than worshipping statesmen and criticizing the opposing sides.

As the growing citizen, the future of democracy is in the hands of the youth. This generation, influenced by social media and advancements like AI, has the potential to become the strongest channels of democracy. With everything from politics to nature in our fingertips and in-built curiosity, the youth is most promising in governing the nation and accelerating its path towards success. With the increasing cranial capacity and technological assistance, the coming generations can lead and guide the country towards an eternal day of peace.

Justice and freedom. We are apt to exercise discipline in the now most impactful fields of cyberworld and international co-operation. With social media and the rightful use of it, democracy can be achieved in all these fields at the same time. It is the mark of such an intellectual maturity of the whole world that, despite minor outbursts, nations worldwide are at a state of global co-operation and peace and their strive for growth abandoning all inherited or biased prejudices even in the most advanced state of military resources and potential. With social media, the violations of this tranquility is critically condemned and reacted to by the global audience itself. So, to ensure the smooth movement of the coming eras of developments, we must strive to become an educated, diplomatic and morally valuable generation.

Unfortunately, this bright future is now as clouded as it can be bright. All our adventures are marred by misinformation, fake news, the use of drugs and the lack of cyber etiquette. Nowadays, children are prematurely given access to social media and the cyber world, often unwatched, and prone to the dangers and immoralities in that expansive verse. Regulatory measures are only gaining pace in such fields, and the youth is nevertheless succumbing their mind, time and skill to it, often landing on false beliefs and misleading. This can hinder the development of the true sense of civility and leadership qualities and can affect the formation of an apt democratic system in the future. The use of drugs and psychotropic substances has given way to the complete destruction of young minds and lives. These two evils, combined with inherited prejudice, lack of awareness and biased judgement can give way to a stagnant political atmosphere, and a destruction akin to the WWI scenario in the end. Therefore, the need of awareness and education increases exponentially with the growing advancements. The next generation should be equipped.

with right knowledge and understanding of the changes around them in order to stay free and just amid the growing alarms of technology and other dangers. With proper guidance and development, we can pave the future of democracy, forming a society of people and ensuring that every voice is being heard and heeded.

The expansion of the government into the cyberworld and the future generations is important to ensure the political fertility of the next generation. Parents should do more than vote and ensure that the children are given room to spread their knowledge, awareness and moral views and prune them into better individuals of tomorrow. As the future generation, every one of a child's thoughts, experiences and exposures shape the dormant citizen in them and if nurtured well, they would grow to be the responsible, rightful adults of the future. As mentioned before, by using social media and participating in the democratic process of our nation, we are being responsible for the inequalities and human rights violations world wide and should be capable of forming strong sides against them and making a better place to live for each and every human being worldwide. We cannot let evils like drugs and misleading spoil the bright future ahead of us. We must be prepared to become the most enlightened and guided generation and lead the many generations yet to come.

The future of democracy implies the future of humanity and the future of modern world. It is a huge responsibility of the youth to ensure the progress of democracy along with that of the other fields, for the sake of them and for himself. The success of democracy lies neither in material prosperity nor the political conflicts of a country, but in the holistic development of each and every citizen in it. It is the light to every field and aspect of growth, the light for man to look for ^{while} ~~when~~ encountering.

the unknown dangers ahead of him, whether in invention or living. It is of paramount importance to secure true democracy in every nation for the unhindered development of the world. The future of democracy is as, maybe a shade more, important as, or than, every other field of development, as the future of AI and robotics, and space exploration. The needed co-existence of man is essential, the foundation stone of the development of his race, and as its mode, so is democracy. Every other field is the fruit of the unending human thirst for knowledge and its useful application, while the continuity of democracy is a necessity of the race. What can be achieved if some voices are heard and others are suppressed? What use is it if some of us are going to space while some are cruelly ignored? What use is it if we give life to gears and don't know how to live and care as a group? This is where democracy comes in, at the very core of every aspect of life and progress.

Where there are a number of expanding, curious, thirsty brains and they tend to separate and expand differently, to a brighter future, to lead and guide them as one, as the sunlight for every fruit and flower, never hindered or blocked, truthful, transparent, democracy.
