

FUTURE OF DEMOCRACY

The happiness of citizens lies in a country's governance. If the leader is not good then the country will reach its worst position. To have a good ruling government the only choice is democracy. Democracy as defined by Abraham Lincoln, is of the people, by for the people and by the people. It is one of the most trusted way of governance. Through this, people can enjoy their rights and express themselves.

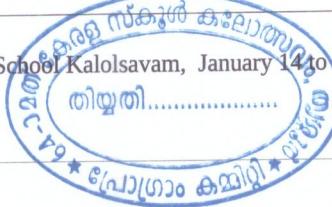

But now a new question has arisen, "What will be the future of democracy?". Today democracy holds a strong influence among nations because of its characters that promises a secure life. It may change in future, it can either improve or collapse.

In today's era, dictatorship and monarchy are the other forms of government that exists other than democracy. In monarchy, a single person rules a whole nation, taking control of all aspects and asserting his/her ways to the citizens. Such nations promoting monarchy cannot promise a trusted and secure future. The happenings in North Korea is a clear example to show that countries having monarchical rule ^{has to} may follow the selfish wants of the rulers. In dictatorship also, the same theory can be applied. Regarding to the above facts we can conclude that democracy is ~~can~~ is most likely to prevail.

Nowadays, people are protesting against the heartless ruling systems, so in near future, the chances of democracy being more prominent than other types of government is high.

In a democratic country, like India, where there is a written and approved constitution that promotes basic rights and the citizens views on each law, is likely to have more approval. Also such countries can contribute well towards development. It means that, the answer to the question, "What will be the future of democracy?", is that its future will be bright and shiny as the sun.

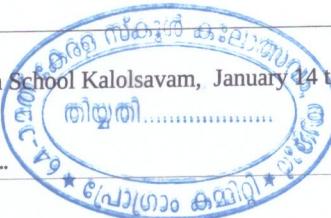

It is most likely that one day the whole world will have a democratic rule due to many factors. Common people will prefer democracy, and maybe all nations may work towards a 'democratic world' where each and every one are able to contribute their parts towards the progress of nation. If this happens then the world will be like a more comfortable place where each person are enjoying their rights.

In such a scenario, many things will change. Even in democracy, problems like corruption, bribery and fraud exists. So, in future, countries will improve in a much efficient way with the help of technology. Preserving the value of democracy in a country is not an easy task as we can see in the case of Pakistan which failed as a true democratic country. So in the future world, there may be instances when terrorism can take over democracy too, but it is a possibility.

Even if all countries, cannot be truly democratic, changes will occur in the to countries which believe in democracy. In India, lawyers are finding loopholes from the constitution to protect their clients. So, with the help of advanced technology the constitution can be rewritten or improved in an effective way changing the ~~possi~~ scenario, where a criminal will no longer be left unpunished. Like this, in future, technology can contribute a lot for the improvement of democracy. It is clear that a good democratic government will be able to solve the issues of common people and in future where technology, development and comforts are increasing democratic government can reach out to people in a more freindly and efficient manner.

There can be more changes like, when the UN accepts democracy as the best... and... helps... to... spread... it.....

..... At... present,... democracy... is... the... safest... option... but... still... it... has... its... own... flaws.... In... India,... people... are... protesting... on... the... roads... for... reasons... that... are... either... too... silly... or... it... is... against... the... nation's... and... its.... citizen's.... welfare.... In... countries... like... America,... such... instances... are... rare,... so... in... future.... maybe... all... countries... will... be... able... to.... prevent... such... problems... that... needs... strict.... governance.....

..... In... the... future,... we... will... be... either.... influenced... by... AI... or... asking... its... help... too... much.... So... there... can... be... possibilities... when... our... constitution... will... be... digitalised... and.... all... new... improvements... shall... be... made... with... the... help... of... AI... powered... robots.... In... such... cases,... illegal... gangs... or... other... people... can... manipulate... the... constitution... by... hacking.... the... machines... or... using... a... new... way... that... is... unknown.....

In today's democratic world, most leaders and politicians of a country and state have a period of 5 years before they are replaced or again chosen by elections. So if that person turns out to be a nasty, selfish and heartless leader then we have to endure his / her rule. But in future, under such circumstances, the democracy will improve in a way ^{by} which can take immediate actions ~~one~~ can be taken against that ruler.

In any conditions, it is clear that the democracy will improve in all sectors in the coming future. We cannot completely argue that monarchy and dictatorship is worse because even them when under the right leadership can result in a better future. But still, democracy used ^{to} stand out and it is standing out so in the future it will, in a more majestic way.

Over the years, we have seen that more countries are opting for democracy so in future, democracy will be favoured by all. We, humans are changing day by day and our ability to acknowledge and reshape things can shape anything including democracy. The unity we have can lead to a much secure future where, true democracy will not be a star in the faraway universe and unable to achieve.

Countries like India which is democratic, when improved can lead to a better India where frequent regional clashes due to minor issues and unwanted protests can be prevented. In democratic countries, people think that they are the superior and can do whatever they want but often they forget about the other citizens and start to protest for a mad... reason... which... may... be... against... a... nation's... interests... or... against... the... interests... of... other... people... living... there... And... this... customs... is... becoming... so... often... that... each... morning... a... small... group... can... be... seen... protesting... for... unwated... reasons... and... In... such... instance... public... properties... is... attached... and... common... people... gets... uncomfortable... In... future... a... better,... strict... and... well-informed... democratic... system... with... an... efficient... constitution... can... avoid... such... problems... decreasing... the... amount... of... problems...

..... But... future... is... progressive... as... well... as... vast... to... predict,... the... river... of... democracy... can... take... an... unexpected... turn... whenever... and... wherever... possible... In... such... cases... the... most... important... changes... which... are... sure... to... happen... and... affect... the... future... democracy... is... what... we... are... understanding...

The increasing technology and its numerous effects that affects all sectors can cause changes in democracy too. Democracy is a system designed so that each and every citizen of a country can express his/her views. In the coming future, people will be able to express themselves more efficiently leading to better transparency and well-improved governance. This in turn, will lead to a democratic world which ^{will be} far more efficient.

If there is a question or doubt about the sustainability of democracy, then the only possible threat it can face will be terrorism because common people will only prefer a democratic country. Due to factors like addiction to social media and increased drug usage more youngsters are falling prey to terrorism.

So... in... near... future... it... is... possible... that... terrorism... can... become... a... huge... and... great... threat... to... democracy.....

..... In conclusion, democracy is likely to improve in all ways. Future and the numerous possibilities within can shape democracy. Even so, democracy is the form of government preferred by all and thus it is likely to flourish in future generations. Democracy that provides all consideration to many of us can be shaped by our actions too. We ourselves can contribute to the protection of democracy and make the world's future bright because a democratic world can lessen the problems of citizens more efficiently.
