THE VISION FOR A NEW INDIA

India, a land of diversity is one among the many developing nations. The first thing that pops up in the mind of individuals upon noticing 'new India' is the young creative minds. 'A new India' should consist of all the beneficial revolutions ~~with~~ taking our history and culture along with it. Just as a coin which has two sides to itself, a new India comes with its own pros and cons.

A new India, as many individuals dream, must be a country which makes its citizens feel at home as well as is profitable to the govt and country. This aim, unfortunately, is yet to ^{be} achieved.

'Richer become Richer'

A famous proverb which can ~~be~~ certainly be used to represent the vulnerable side of our society, the society which still lacks the freedom which was already given to them years ago. The lack of facilities and the lack of improvisation is something which when given to them may produce a better yield to ~~our~~ the country itself.

Mahatma Gandhi, the father of our nation dreamed India to be free of toxicity, a land which would be safe for the women and children, a land which doesn't have much traces of unemployment, etc. Similarly Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru wanted the citizens to stay secure and to be content. These politicians, just like us, too had their own vision of how the country should be. This is certainly achieved by India upto some extent.

In addition to these, ~~s~~ India is in the need of education and hygiene. 'Health' and 'Learning' is significant for one's growth which leads to the country's growth. As the famous saying goes; 'Education is a powerful tool', it may bring out the revolutionary and innovative minds. Hygiene is another major problem which should be considered by the nation. There are still many areas which lack the availability of proper care and treatment. For the minds to work, the health should cooperate.

Moreover, India will soon become 5G in which many works would be replaced by the machines. The technology is growing and so is the rate of unemployment. Some employment are not even a least bit of beneficial to the employees. This takes us to another stepping stone, 'unemployment', to reach the country's best.

India, which is well known for its diversity and unity should be present at all times. The beautiful history and ~~memories~~ mesmerising monuments should be preserved for our upcoming generations.

The ~~can~~ Furthermore, our country should be free of all sort of illegal practices and corruption. The one who deserves something should get it. Corruption makes people lose faith in the govt. But our government is 'of the people, by the people and for the people' and hence should certainly be in the favour of its citizens.

Keeping all of this at one side, another side should ~~of~~ ^{be of} maintaining a friendly relationship with the foreign countries. 'It always takes two to tango', and maintaining cooperation especially with the neighbouring countries would not cause any harm.

Summing up, a new India should prioritise the economical growth, foreign relationship, wildlife and most importantly it's own citizens.

In conclusion, a country which is rich in heritage, has a safe environment, has content families, with less crime rates, high economy and a truth favouring judiciary makes it a happy place. 'It's better late than never', and it's obviously better to start coming together for the nation's good than to never.
