

The Vision For A New India

India, the land of diversity, is said to have developed along the banks of the river Indus. Often called by the name 'Bharat Mata', India is known for its contribution during the vedic period as well. India is a land of great history as well. The colonisation of India by the British till the middle of twentieth century, has inspired the people of India to have a vision of their own. The Constitution of India itself reflects the ideals of the freedom struggle thereby making the people aware of the necessity of independence, secularism, liberalisation, free diplomacy etc. India has been witness of many wars even after the Independence. It includes the wars with China moment after signing the Panchsheel Principles, and the Indo-Pak war as well. Therefore, we can conclude that a safe approach towards the future is something at risk since India's diplomacy with its neighbours are not on a friendly move. This is where the importance of having a vision of for a new India gets highlighted.

As mentioned before, India has been a witness to many of the world's thirst of expanding territory, growing economies etc. Therefore the vision of a new India as ~~the~~ a representative from a student future generation, I have to discuss it about from different angles. There are many questions that arise when the topic about India's future is discussed. It includes, 'Are women safe in India?', 'Is gender equality ensured in India?', 'Is India's economy on a fast moving phase?', 'Is India's diplomatic strategy with the neighbouring countries on a good move', 'Is skill development ensured along with secondary education?' etc. The answer to all these questions may not be fulfilled easily since it requires greater thinking. Every Indian youth dream of an India where there is no war, poverty, complete education etc. The fulfillment of these dreams may be a heavy task, but it should be ensured for the betterment of future generation.

In recent times, we have been witness to many protests in and out of India about gender equality. We aim for a future India where women get the same right that of man. But there are many incidents, where gender equality has been proved wrong. These arises the question 'Are women safe in India?'. Every year, the death toll relating to rapes are increasing in India. Here we should not forget to note the the incident that hit us hard in the year 2012. It's none other than the 'Nirbhaya' case. A girl who was along with her friend was brutally raped and killed by four men in Delhi. Is it just because she travelled at night? It cannot be an excuse. Eventhough the rapists were hanged, the disagreement of International Court of Justice regarding their hanging is something to be ashamed. Even after this incidents, there are many 'Nirbhayas' who were born in India. In this security issues, the government should have an active participation in implementing women welfare measures.

The government has claimed many times about their initiatives for a better living for women. But day by day it is proved that these measures are not enough. It has to be effectively implemented. Besides the arising rape cases, there are many sectors in which women are not allowed to work for their needs. The Article 16 of Indian Constitution clearly states the equality of opportunities in employment beyond the barriers of colour, caste and creed. But the point in the article is just confined to letters but not implemented properly. Only 16% of women are the founders and co-founders of startups in India, where the percent is almost equal in America when women and men are compared. There should be special packages for women entrepreneurship in India for further developments. During the Roman empire in 3CE to 7CE, women have been witness to domestic violence. The case of dowry was not also minimised then. It is shame that the centuries old system still prevail in the 21st century. There should be enforceable punishment in the case of dowry and ~~women~~ domestic violence. Only then, the rights of women can be secured. The future India thirsts for a society where ~~the~~ her daughters are equally considered as men. We cannot improve our economy without the participation of half population. ~~The~~ The world is moving a fast phase. Therefore, we Indians have to move along with it. Therefore, the first priority of India towards its future should be the gender equality's enactment. Let's together visualize for a new India where our daughters are not caged birds but soaring tigress.

The British colonised India for more than two centuries. India who was an exporter of finished goods later became the importer of British goods finished in machines. This ~~destruction~~ destroyed India's flourishing economy. When the British left India in 1947 India became a land filled with poverty and deaths. During the British rule, women literacy was only 7% of the total 16% literacy rate that existed at that time. Infant mortality of 218 per 1000 children. India's health facilities were on the worst stage. From there, India now became an exporter of pharmaceuticals, with more than half of the population getting primary education and the infant mortality reducing each year. This is a great achievement. But still India has a lot to gain. The basic amenity for the betterment of new India is the need of a consistent economy. India is the fourth largest economy in the world. It was surpassed by the 'Great Britain' who colonised India. But this consistency has to be maintained. India should move from the fourth place to atleast second place since its population is increasing. The 'COVIDIAN ERA' has greatly affected India's economy. But India recovered from it in a much more faster than the assumption of some great economies. The Nobel prize winning economist Abhijit Banerjee stated that India need to print more money for its Recovery from economic crises. But it was later proved wrong by the collective efforts of Indians. It is due to the inconsistency in economic field that India becomes a target to many people. Every year, the defensive sector receives more money than the health field. This needs to be stopped. Defensive sector is important for the safety of future India. Therefore health sectors also has the equal importance. Therefore the budget should be equally distributed. The covid cases are rising currently. The chance for another lockdown is undeniable. Therefore for reducing the death tolls and casualties, health sector should be well-equipped. Only then the growth of economy can be maintained without any disruption. The consistency of economy has a key role in visualizing India's new future. Because India's future lies in it's economy. Therefore let's aim for a new India which has consistent economy.

Even after independence India has been a victim of several wars. It includes the war with China. Even though China won the war, India learnt a new chapter that friendly diplomacy with neighbouring countries may sometimes harm ourselves. The Indo-China war happened just after the signing of 'Panchsheel principles' between Jawaharlal Nehru and Chinese President Chau-en-lai. The Panchsheel principles itself aim for a peaceful relationship between the two countries. The slogan 'India China Bhai-Bhai' did not lasted for long. It was China's jealousy in India's growth that led to the war which resulted in great fatalities. Even after the war, the relation between India and China are not on a good note. The dashes between the Indian and Chinese armies along the line of Actual Control is an example of this. But this enmity between these two nations should not be kept moving on. This will challenge not only India's future but also China's future. After the World War 2,

The world nations opted for a <sup>Unipolar</sup> ~~Bipolar~~ world under America. It was adopted to eliminate further wars. But this is not followed by many nations. The best example is India's neighbour, China. This nature of China is a great threat India. China fills provokes India along its border by building bridges along Arunachal Pradesh border. At least 20 level meeting under the military chiefs have been done but the outcome was not impactful. Therefore India's defensive sector should be kept strong to tackle further developments from China as well as Pakistan. The weak mind of Indian army may result in degrading future. Therefore the fix has to be kept soon to prevent further events. The future of India visualise for a new India where she can cooperate with her neighbours without any concerns.

The Indian diplomacy has gained momentum in recent years. India's stand on diplomacy is often appreciated by the world leaders. It doesn't mean that India no longer need improvement in future. The world is progressing each day and the requirement in changing current policies is also required. India's stand in the Ukraine - Russia war deserves a special applause. Unlike the other nations, who wake up during specific cases, India stands alone as a single power with it's own opinions. The recent ties of India with America, Russia, Israel, Bangladesh etc are on a full swing. But the recent relation of China with Russia is something India has to be concerned of. China and Russia, the nations following marxist ideologies, have made great contributions to the world. India and Russia have been greater friends since the time of independence. But the new approach by China, may be unwinning which may result in harm to our nation. Therefore, these type of approaches by world nations towards other friendly countries has to be watched by India. India's diplomatic stand in these approaches

Results in India's future. In the vision for a new India, Indians should aim for a better diplomatic strategy which should be winning. The works of current diplomats and the Minister of External Affairs, S. Jaishankar needs a special mention. It is through these people, India aim for a better life.

India's role in education is a matter of discussion. From the vedic periods, India has been a great tutor. India is the origin of state of the epic Ramayana and Mahabharata. From this, we can understand that India's role in literature as well as education comes from a long time. Education is not about learning from books. There are many students whose intelligence are not confined to some written lines. They have their intelligence in special skills. Therefore these skills should be identified at an early stage. It is through schools that skill development can be achieved. Indian youth should be educated based on their tastes. Therefore the

The sector of skill development should be started from secondary education. This will not only help in improved education but will also help in the progression of India's economy. In many foreign countries, skill development is given more importance than booky knowledge. This is one of the reason behind their success in every fields. Therefore, the skilled youths will help in the progression of future India. India needs skilled youths who can contribute to her rather than booky educated ones.

The principle of 'secularism' is of great concern in India. India is a land of diversity. It includes the people of all religions. The constitution of India is based on 'substantive provisions'. It ensures that no partiality is created among it's people. These but in recent years, mainly after 2014, ~~even~~ the principle of secularism is haunted in India. Some medias states that the one-party domination has now ~~is~~ created sectarian agenda. There is a claim that the enforcement of 'Citizenship Bill' is a move to target certain sections of the society. India now receives criticism from different nations for 'breaking of this 'securitism rule'. The Kashmiri Pandits are also targets of many groups. It is the agenda of some people to promote their own religion which results in these problems. Therefore, this has to be stopped. Educated India requires a generation who has compassion, brotherhood among different sections of people. This is only possible through the collective efforts of the government and citizens. Therefore we can aim for a new India where the principle of securitism is maintained. It is through the cooperation between different sectors of the society that the future of new India can be ensured.

The role of technology and media for new India is undeniable. The revolution of human beings from Primates to Homo sapiens have Constantly witnessed the development in technologies. I started with machines and now is moving along with the area of internet. Varko Dabrama came to India in search of spies he had known. If internet was available then, India's future would be entirely different. Indians have always contributed a lot to the field of Technology. Sundar Pichai the CEO of google is an Indian. This itself is enough to describe about India's role in technology and internet. The freedom of media is a matter of discussion. In India, medias are haunted recently. These are the fifth pillar of a democratic nation. Therefore their freedoms should be ensured. A free India needs free media innovation. Therefore the future India should glory in these fields.

These are some of my visions of a free and new India. The list extends from women empowerment to the freedom of medias. Every section of society has great significance in its contribution for a new India. India, the land of diversity should rank in future not just in specific things, but act as an all rounder. The future of new India is in its future generation. We should mould the new India with the elements of gender equality, secularism, strong diplomacy, consistent economy etc. Only then the vision of a new India can be attained. India, the land which was colonized is the now the fastest growing economy in the world. This achievement was not made in a day. It includes the sweat of billion of Indians. Therefore we have to value their sweat and aim for a better India. Let's pledge together that the new India will be the best nation in the whole world. Let's set example to other nations by fixing to our root principles inscribed in our constitution.
