

I am with you

I walked across the old grave
Holding her hands tight
A wind came by,
Accompanying the twilight

The wind rushed through her hair
Walking along the green grass.
Dew drops kissed her bare foot
Accompanied by a silence.

She looked into my eyes
My heart felt frozen
My arms felt numb
The silence cried out Macabre!

How long will we walk?
When there is no where to go
A drizzling rain came by
When the dusk started to grow.

We ran beneath a tree
The wild shower made us shiver
Holding her next to me
We settled there down.

The tiredness pushed us into a Soothing sleep
We slept till the dawn.

Sunlight came by, waking us up.
On to a new day of hope.

Her eyes still cried out macabre!
drawing us back to our parents
The best days of our life
ended all of a sudden.

I stood up holding her hands
We walked out to the Sunlight
Desiring for a new life
bothered 'bout the future

I looked into her eyes eyes which cried all day long
My lips moved, saying
'I am with you.'

I am her brother,
Her one and only brother
I'll make her fly to the triumph
What they all desired for

I wanted to serve the country
Sending her to a boarding school
I toiled hard, longed to see her,
But fate never felt pity.

She often texts me in email now.
longing to see her only brother
She even boasts to her friends 'bout
the brave stories of her brother.

Her text always ends with,
 "When will you come back?"
 How can I make you know my girl.
 The country needs me now so badly.

It feels good, when she posts with caption
 # love my brother, miss those days
 But now she dont reply much
 But it's never her mistake.

When she update, saying that
 # She's alone, my heart sinks...
 The promise i've been keeping...
 Saying that I'll never leave her alone.

It feels like months.
 She hadn't replied me yet.
 To the old school messages of her brother
 Who is isolated from the new world.

The war is about to explode
 Everyone's busy with saying farewell
 Her face flashed into my mind
 The eyes which stared into mine.

Scribbled a text into her mail
 wiping up my tears
 Doubting my self
 whether I could keep my promise.

She started losing the ones
 She thought will be her forever
 She was all alone, with no shoulder to cry
 All alone in her world . . .

Days passed by

She got to see a news,
 Her heart broke into pieces
 She rushed through her mails .

She opened the one marked unread
 it was nothing but his message,
 saying that '# I am with you'.
 Her heart felt numb.

He was my brother,
My one and only brother.
He did n't suit in my world.
But the truth—

I was her brother
 Her one and only brother
 She never realised, that,
 She was my one and only world.