DREAM WAVE

Wandering like lost souls

I stood on the cliff for no one calls

To take me home, which I lost and is sure can't gain at any cost.

All the dears and nears I had were all buried by the waves I loved.

Whirling, twisting, rise up and down

all I lost in the reddish dawn.

What to hope, for I see no green

all the horizon is blue and clear.

No piece of land to stand beloved

Nor the ones are near, who loved.

I wished to dance, sing and shout

I wished to own a land stretched out.

I wished to sail, see unknown lands

I wished to use my magic wands.

And all I wished have met the truth.

'Cause here I can realize my breath.

I dance with the waves up and down.

I sing with the wind which I own.

Here is the vast land, wide that spread where I wander without a bread.

Here I sail across countries with glee,

well, they just see me as refugee!

The wars are far away on lands

But I turn and freeze in the middle of oceans.

Can dreams heal these pleasing pains,

On the sight of blood stains on window panes.

At the end of battles fought,
In the flood of victories caught,
Drowned is the life of millions more
All that left is without core.

On the way to north or south
In this world full of lies, my truth
Is set on the dreams that thine
To live some more for there is hope.

Even if no lands, no grains, nor people I owe
I want my dreams and I won't bow
To surrender all that too.
If I do, then what I am meant to.

There is a land, were I live at ease
For humankind live in peace.
There is no gained ones nor lost
No land, no grains, nor people to boast

In that dreamland full of joy,
I would live with my family
we owe a land, I can see for no one calls me a refugee!
