My India - SARE JAHAN SE
ACHA'!

'Sare Jahan se Acha' - this was the reply Rakesh Sharma, our very first astronaut, gave when the then Prime minister Indira Gandhi asked him how the country looks from outer space. And in this answer of his lies the rich and varied heritage of our nation, 'The India'

Accommodating more than one hundred languages representing their specific cultures, we live in a land of diversities. Each Indian is different from one another and thus India plays a key role in helping mankind find its perspective.

So our vision for a new India must be to make it 'Sare Jahan se Acha'. That means a land better than any other.

We know that education is the foundation upon which any change is built. Hence, to implement any sort of change, we need our country to be literate. The young ones are our tomorrow. And so, no child shall be prohibited from gaining his/her right for education.

New India must be a land where both man and nature shall stay together in harmony. How many natural calamities occurred here this past decade? Why every monsoon makes us go through incredulous floods? We should aim to revive our indigenous species and give them a better life.

Furthermore, no discrimination shall act as a barrier between our people. Once Gandhiji said, "India shall only attain its independence if even the poorest of the people feel that it's their country and work for it." The scenario is pretty much the same. that our unity is the best way to make a better life possible. Our religion, caste, region or not even the clothes we put on shall be raised as a spear against us.

We need an India where both men and women are treated equally in front of the society. There should never be a 'gender gap' so that a woman can reside peacefully in this country. Atrocities towards women should come to an end. Our people should know that girls are never a burden.

A call of women empowerment must be started from the households of Indian villages. As we know education results in employment and thus in empowerment, no girl shall be put inside her kitchen.

India is one of the largest economic powers of this world. And hence the advent of technology evidently contributes to its development. But still we needed a covid-19 to universalize education! The high quality content inside the internet wasn't used for research and other educational purposes till then. The marginalised sections of India were unaware of this fact and never got a opportunity to bring up their talents.

We are in search of brilliant minds who could culture more innovative ideas for making this a better world. Hospitals and other life rescue services shall never be kilometers away from our people. Any person in need should be immediately taken care of. With the threat of pandemic remaining, our health sector should be vivid enough.

A Former American President once said, 'We should place our eyes on stars and feet on the ground.' We should always be on search of the best, but still should have a little wisdom of our home to live happily, according to Theodore Roosevelt. India without its culture is similar to a pen without ink. We should all be able to accept this and be contented in all the festivals happening around irrespective of religion. Hatred isn't the way of showing our respect to others.

Moreover, every Indian should be aware of his/her rights and at the same time their fundamental duties.

Our constitution is our soul and so as a citizen of this country we are responsible to obey the rules inscribed in it.

Our judicial system is so strong and always favours its people. Even though

We come across corruption and bribery and at instances, India lies in its people and because of that, our Government is trying their level best to eradicate such malpractices from the society.

We all dream of a better India and for that we should also consider taking small steps. We should raise our voice against atrocities. Helping others shall be made a habit so that our society could smell more empathy than sympathy. No Indian is more or less while residing in this country. Our secularism, prosperity, integrity and bravery is unique and is bound to hearts real close. Facing the challenges of tomorrow is always hard. But remember, 'Journey of a thousand miles start from a single step. And that first step is always the hardest to place.'

After all this is India. A country that contributed some of the greatest aristocrats into this world. A.P.J. Abdul Kalam, E. K. Janaki Ammal, J. C. Bose, Shakuntala Devi and a long list to dig in. The new India must be a place where no newborn shall doubt in himself but has the courage to face the hardships of life. No one shall get underated in our new world so that he/she remembers the country ~~on~~ not only on 'occassions' but also on every bit of air they breath.

Through our own ways in small but thoughtful steps, we can create a whole new side out of India. But for that we need a powerful mind. "The ignited mind of the youth is the most powerful weapon" as once said by Dr. Kalam.

We all have our patriotism deep inside of us. So we know how our new India should be. Of course, the demands would vary with time. But what lasts is the feeling that 'It is India, my country.' Our freedom was the sacrifice of many courageous minds. And we should always keep in mind to respect that freedom no matter what.

India thus can remain as the best as ~~one~~ said by Sharma - 'Sare Jahan se Acha.' For that we should always also be looking around ourselves making progress in every sector, helping a hand one another and India ^{will} be a better place for its people.
