How Modern Technology Affects Human Values

There's no doubt in the fact that technology has been influencing our world in unlimited ways. The modern developments in the technological field have paved way for advancement in all spheres of life and the advantages they hold are countless. The evoluement of humans and their thinking abilities have opened doors to many amazing discoveries and the very start of the technological field is probably one of them. As of now, life without technology can't be considered a possibility, but rather, a far fetched dream.

Technology has made our lives easier and it has made possible things that couldn't even be dreamt of until a few years ago. The growth in artificial intelligence is solely due to how dependant humans are on it. Even simple tasks require the assistance of technology or artificial intelligence in one way or another and this has played a major role in the destruction in the development of skills of humans. The ways kids used to develop basic skills has changed a lot due to technology and that might be enough for people to understand the influence technology has, on humans. The way we interact and our social skills have changed too, and it's not safe to assume that these things — are changing for the better.

Today, people tend to become a lot more sophisticated and conserved, and the use of technology and social media has probably played a role in this change. Technology has also dealt with close-knit relationships in our society and have directed our society to be more interested in virtual reality and relationships that are solely confined to 2 or more lit up screens.

The impact technology has had on social relationships can even be seen in family values and the mindsets that are moulded by the same. The human values possessed by a particular person are moulded by the environment he or she grew up in and the role models or mentors he or she looked up to in his or her developing stages of life. The inference that technology has destructed social relationships and environments is enough proof for the fact that it has paved way for the deterioration of human values in adults and children alike.

When we use something for a prolonged time, we often become enslaved to it, and it influences us in ways that we don't even recognise. Technology exposes us to endless possibilities and opportunities, and this is both a merit-

As days go by, technology keeps developing and the advantages they hold increases too. Technology was created to make our lives easier but it is our responsibility to make sure that it doesn't control our mindsets or the way we interact with our fellow beings. Without our morals and values we are nothing. At the end, the only thing that matters is our attitude and our worth is summed up by the morals and dignity we have. Though it is important to be open-minded and accepting of new advancements, it is just as important for us to keep our values close to our hearts.

Even though there are many ways in which technology could badly influence us and our values we shouldn't let it destruct our values. That's how we become responsible technology consumers.
